Coming up this February is one of my favorite holidays. Some might assume Valentine's Day, but really it is Groundhog's day. Groundhog's day is a holiday so preposterous that being extremely keen to find out what the rodent has predicted amuses me. Studies have shown the ground hog we follow is 39% effective in the last 100 years. It is a 50-50 chance, and he is wrong more than half the time. Honestly, he isn't wrong, he is a rodent, but we choose to accept what he has done, and interpret it as fact. I am afraid sometimes we as Christians might do that as well. How often do we take what someone says about God, Christianity, or life before we listen to what God has communicated with us through the Bible? Just as we should never trust a groundhog to tell us the weather, we should never trust someone else with our salvation. We should study, as Paul says in 2nd Timothy 2, to show ourselves approved. We should search the scripture so that we are approaching God and his word for our knowledge.
