A few weeks ago, on a Friday night, one of the officials on my crew missed a call. It was the 3rd play of the game & it was very obvious that he made the wrong call. As fate would have it, it went against the coach on my sideline. Needless to say, this coach was not happy. I had to listen to him complain about one missed call the entire 1st half. As the halftime festivities were concluding and we are walking to the field, the same coach approached me again still complaining about one missed call. My response to him was:

Coach, if you haven't made a single mistake this entire game then I'll allow you to keep acting like a child over one missed call. But, if you have made just one mistake this game, I'm not going to penalize your team b/c of you; I'm going to eject you from the game. Are we clear? Have you made a mistake this game?

In life, we get "bent out of shape" when we make mistakes. My approach to mistakes is simple (I hope I have conveyed this to our youth). There are 4 things you should ALWAYS do when addressing mistakes:

- 1. MAKE IT
- 2. ADMIT IT
- 3. LEARN FROM IT
- 4. FORGET IT

No one is perfect.....so why do we get so upset when people make mistakes? Let's give each other a break & see what happens.

In Him,

Joshua S. Holloway
